

How to make our city/school better with race

Our school accepts many religions. However, we can change it to be even more accepting. Maybe if we had all of the students stop talking about different races and religions then that could also stop 50% of the bullying. We could also have more races accepting posters around the school. Maybe we could have more languages to learn more than just Spanish for the 6th grade but for 7th and 8th they get four, more like Arabic or Chinese other languages could lead to more races feeling accepted.

Maybe even having more teachers with a different race. The school could also have more classes about race and study other religions. That would maybe make people want to express how they feel about different races and different cultures. We have three languages and there are well over 100 languages in the whole world. Well, to be exact there are 6,500 and most likely more to be discovered. Just saying why do three, when you could have so many more?

In our school, we have history/social studies and I think we should talk more about how the races were back in the day. Talk about how school used to be in the 1980's, for example. We could also talk about how the city used to be. I'm sure that I'm not the only kid that wants to learn more about how it was in my town. How my city, my state, used to be before I was here. How I went to school.

There are more ways that we can accept race in our school. Like learning what girls wore in different countries that had different races. Like if they covered their hair and why they covered their bodies and why. Certain dances that they did and what it represented. If they had to cut their hair or if they grow it out and why. Things like that I would like to learn more about in 6th grade that way we can learn more about other things in 7th, 8th, 9th, etc...

Also IF ONE COULD ACT, WE ALL COULD ACT TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE. If the city/cities would just try to make a difference I'm sure we could. But we would have to work as a team that is how we will change the city. We could do all this stuff in several different ways, like protesting, making posters on social media, and doing all of these things in schools.

People have changed the WORLD before. So why can't we change the city/school? Make a difference, because by changing one city that could change the state and by changing the state it could change the country, which could change the world. What if you were the person to change the world?
