

To deny someone of love, is denying someone of happiness. Happiness and love are the essentials to life, so why do some deny others the right to live the way they want to? Why do we have to deny people of this beautiful thing? Here's the utter and complete truth, because they're different and a lot of people are afraid of what's different.

10% of the world's population identifies as gay. History has been wrong towards these people. But now is the time to change, now is the time to fight back. Let people love who they love, let them live in peace. They are who they are, and who they are is perfect. So teach this lesson to everyone, love is love.

Teach every generation to be how they are and love who they love. And yes, people will argue for this right. But we must show them, we must educate them and we must try. History has been wrong over and over again, now is the time to stop the cycle.

My belief is to treat people the right way, it doesn't matter who they love. They are their own, beautiful selves. Some of the most important people in my life are a lesbian couple. They have supported my family in so many ways, I am so thankful for them. But, I could not stand to see them hurt or treated wrongly for who they are. I realize this has happened to many people, I wish for it to stop now.

I will not tolerate unfair actions towards these people, I hope that adults will do the same. Adults can involve lessons from this in school. By teaching the sense of right from wrong to younger generations, there is a brighter future. The past can show, the present can learn, and the future can change.

The marriage equality act was passed in 2011. Despite this, some people are working hard to get it overturned. We cannot allow this to happen. "Marriage equality is more than just marriage. It's about something greater. It's about acceptance." says actress Charlize Theron.

In conclusion, I believe that change is necessary for this cause. We must work together by not tolerating unacceptable behavior and actions. I hope that the world will accept everyone's own, true and beautiful selves.
